Our history

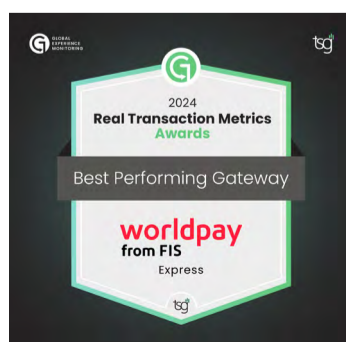

Worldpay can trace its history back to 1971, with the formation of Midwest Payment Systems (MPS) by Fifth Third Bank in the United States, a provider of Electronic Funds Transfer (EFT) to financial institutions. MPS latterly became known as Fifth Third Processing Solutions in 2003. In 2009, Fifth Third Processing Solutions was spun off from Fifth Third Bancorp and started growing by acquisition. In 2012, the company rebranded as Vantiv and began publicly trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

In 1989, UK-based Streamline was launched by the Royal Bank of Scotland, providing electronic payments focused on POS. In 1994, Streamline became one of the first companies to take internet payments and then in 2000 pioneered one of the first eCom shopping carts. By 2010, rebranded as Worldpay, the company became the largest merchant acquirer in Europe and one of the largest globally. In late 2010, Worldpay entered private equity and listed on the London Stock Exchange in 2015.

In 2017, Vantiv and Worldpay came together and was known as Worldpay, becoming the number one global acquirer. It was then acquired by FIS in 2019, creating one of the world's largest payment and financial technology companies. In 2024, Worldpay became an independent company from FIS following a majority acquisition by private equity firm GTCR. As part of the transaction, Worldpay and FIS have entered into a long-term commercial relationship, maintaining a strong strategic go-to-market partnership that provides both Worldpay and FIS clients continued access to a broad set of complementary solutions.

Today, Worldpay is a global industry leader in payments technology and solutions, processing more than then $2.2tn payments for more than 1 million customers across the world.
